Gulf War pilot missing since '91 dead

Navy pilot Capt. Michael "Scott" Speicher (left) was shot down over the Iraq desert on the first night of the Gulf War in 1991 and it was there desert tribes apparently buried him, hidden in the sand from the world's mightiest military all these years. In a sorrowful resolution to the nearly two-decade-old question about his fate, the Pentagon disclosed Sunday it had received new information last month from an Iraqi citizen that led Marines to recover the bones and skeletal fragments—enough for a positive identification. Shot down over west-central Iraq on a combat mission in his FA-18 Hornet on Jan.

17, 1991, Speicher was declared killed by the Pentagon hours later. But 10 years later, the Navy changed his status to missing in action, citing an absence of evidence that Speicher had died.

TIME TO SPARE

A U.S. Army soldier is seen with Iraqi children last month during a patrol in a village south of Baghdad in a picture released by the U.S. military. The number of U.S. missions has dropped since Iraqi security forces took over the cities.

OUT OF IRAQ CITIES, GIS ARE LOOKING FOR STUFF TO DO

Associated Press

MAKASIP, Iraq Out of the cities and letting the Iraqi security forces take the lead, U.S. troops are facing a new challenge: finding things to do.

Not that the dangers have passed. Soldiers knew that as they headed out last week to patrol rural roads south of Baghdad. Seven of their fellow soldiers from Forward Operating Base Falcon have been killed by bombs since May 21.

But this patrol, like many of late, is more about drinking tea with Iraqi policemen, talking with village shopkeepers and chitchatting about cigars.

Instead of going on patrol every day, soldiers in a platoon of Company D, 252 Combined Arms Battalion, go out a couple of times a week with Iraqi policemen to exchange information about the enemy and learn firsthand the needs of local Iraqis so the U.S. can try to provide temporary relief.

"We're in an awkward state where we're having to transition from being the dominant force here to taking a back seat," said Spc. G.A. Garner, 24, of Charlotte, N.C.

Under a U.S.-Iraq security pact, American combat troops completed their pullback from Iraqi cities on June 30, the first stage of a full withdrawal of American forces by the end of 2011. Quitting the cities leaves a test for Iraq's army and police, which failed to stem a wave of Shiite-Sunni slaughter in 2006. That prompted the U.S. troop surge of 2007, which is widely credited with helping to quell the violence.

"We were doing one mission a day. ... Now it's two missions a week," Sgt. 1st Class Henry Rhodes, 40, of Sanford, N.C., said, sitting in a Humvee baking in 115-degree heat. "At the beginning of the agreement, it started getting—I don't know, I wouldn't say boring—we just started running out of things to do."

Car rebate program faces uncertain future

Associated Press

The Obama administration will suspend the "cash for clunkers" program unless the Senate provides $2 billion more for the popular car incentive plan, Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood said in a C-SPAN interview Sunday.

He said he expects the current $1 billion pool to be exhausted by the end of this weekend. The House approved an additional $2 billion on Friday and the administration is pressing the Senate to go along before its summer vacation begins at week's end.

Officials scrambled last week to add money to the Car Allowance Rebate System (CARS), which is designed to get old, polluting vehicles off the road and scrapped while helping car dealers emerge from the recession. The $1 billion has led to the sale of 250,000 new vehicles.

Owners of gas-guzzlers can receive rebates of $3,500 or $4,500 toward the purchase of a new fuel-efficient car. LaHood said 62 percent of the traded-in vehicles were trucks and "these people are buying cars that get much better gas mileage."

WHAT YOU HAD TO SAY

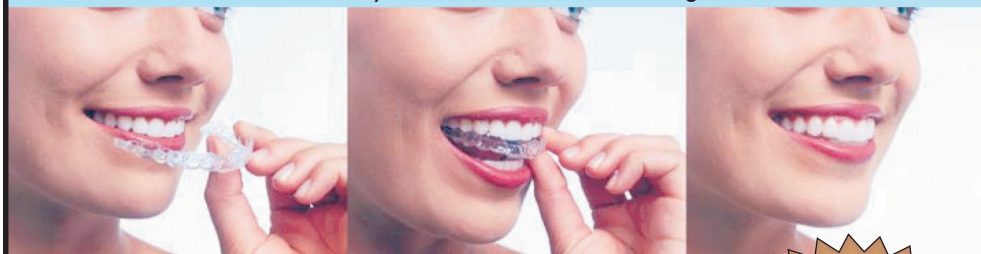

Here's how RedEye's Twitter followers voted on this question: The "cash for clunkers" program has led to 250K new vehicle sales. Assuming it survives, will it get you to buy?

TWEET OF THE WEEK

(Sweeter than what Conan offers, and you don't have to wait up 'til 10:30 p.m. on a school night for it)

@blaine23 Yes, hostess, we'd love the no smoking, no air conditioning section with the wobbly table close enough to smell the restroom. How'd ya know?

Taking out the Twitter trash

I lost hundreds of followers on Twitter last week and I couldn't be happier.

Although one can never be given enough advice for making money, Twitter decided it was time to clean house and remove spam accounts. For some, this meant significant fluctuations in the number of followers displayed.

Just as I was about to cross the 13,000 mark, my spam clean-up kicked in and knocked me down to about 12,500.

I used to think increasing my follower number was the best thing I could do to make myself a driving force on Twitter, but it turns out that's not true. Although I've heard that in some workplaces, you get an espresso maker for reaching the 15,000 milestone (hint, hint).

Porn spammers offering sexy pics and caffeine junkies alike would never believe this, but size doesn't matter.

You hear that Ashton Kutcher and Demi Moore? Even as Twitter's royal couple approach 5 million followers, there's more to life than numbers.

What I find most important, no matter the social media platform I'm using, is friending real followers that want to interact with me just as much as I want to interact with them. And if those users are in the Chicago area, well, that's a bonus.

Sadly, while Twitter should be commended for taking this necessary step, it doesn't seem to be a battle that the good guys can win. Just as one load of spam was removed, I spotted more waiting on the sidelines.

Spammers are getting smarter too. Accounts without avatars used to be a dead giveaway the account was less than pure. Now, spammers are uploading photos of beautiful women to entice users. Like the sailors who ignored the seductive Sirens in Homer's "The Odyssey," your best course of action is to resist—don't follow someone back if you don't know them. At the very least, check out what they are tweeting before taking the plunge.

Do you have a secret weapon for fighting social media spam? Tweet me, poke me—just tell me.

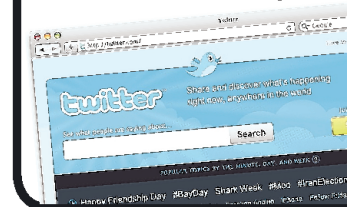

Facebook now more mobile

If you can't wait to post photos and videos to your Facebook profile and you don't have access to a Web browser or application on your phone, you now can just e-mail them in. Go to the Facebook Mobile page at facebook.com/mobile to get your personal upload e-mail address. The subject line of the e-mail becomes the caption and you can always edit it later.

Signs in Naperville warn drivers to watch out for red-light cameras. CHUCK BERMAN/TRIBUNE

Signage language

Chicago Tribune

Welcome signs at the Naperville city limits advertise the population (144,560), an overnight street parking ban and something far less typical: the town's status as "A Red Light Photo Enforced Community."

Naperville is one of the rare cities that posts red-light camera warnings at its borders, even though research shows it makes the cameras more effective in preventing accidents.

LOOK AT THAT

In the U.K., where cameras abound and nab speeders as well as red-light runners, cameras are typically painted a bright yellow or in a striped pattern to stand out. But most cameras in Chicago and the suburbs are painted gun-metal gray or deep pewter and tend to blend into the background of street clutter.

Much of the debate over traffic cameras centers on whether they are genuine safety devices or money-raising gimmicks for municipalities. But a 2005 Federal Highway Administration study found they were more effective at curbing potentially dangerous incidents of red-light running if drivers heading into town were put on notice that somewhere down the road a traffic camera might be lurking.

The Tribune surveyed signage in two dozen of the Chicago-area towns that have red-light cameras. Of those checked, every town had posted warning signs within a few hundred feet of cameras—a state mandate at most camera-monitored intersections.

Andy Hynes, a project engineer with the Naperville agency in charge of red-light cameras, said the signs had been installed at municipal boundaries on several larger roads heading into town.

Members of Gospel Truth Life Changing Ministries in South Austin pray to end violence during a Sunday sermon. KUNITAKAHASHI/TRIBUNE

A pledge to fight

Day after shooting in South Austin, residents vow to take back streets

Chicago Tribune

They poured out onto the sidewalk in their Sunday best, grabbing hands and bowing heads over the blood-stained pavement.

Dozens of women in white floral dresses and men in crisp, collared shirts stood on the street corner Sunday where, less than 24 hours earlier, an unknown gunman shot six people who were attending a funeral at the Gospel Truth Life Changing Ministries church in South Austin.

No longer would they turn a blind eye to the violence they saw around them, the crowd cried out. No longer would they remain a passive voice in their community, they said.

"We're losing a whole generation," Bishop Jeff Davis said in a fiery, three-hour sermon at Gospel Truth on Sunday. "And we're not just losing them to the streets, we're losing them to the graveyard!"

Pledging to help take back their community from violence, the congregation's first act of defiance was to stand and pray where the shootings took place and reclaim that street corner as their own.

Police have yet to identify a suspect in Saturday's shooting, which erupted outside Gospel Truth as hundreds gathered inside to mourn the death of 28-year-old Cornelius Robinson. Friends and family described Robinson, who died of heart failure linked to obesity, as a popular and good-hearted man who'd grown up surrounded by the type of violence that marred his funeral.

Police said they suspect that the shooting was gang related, but those who knew Robinson said he'd managed to escape the gang life that traps so many in the community.

"He was a loving person. He was a Christian man," said Rosetta Elkins, 26, a cousin of Robinson and a member of the Gospel Truth church. A small gathering was mingling outside the church when the gunman approached on foot, police said. He opened fire at a 34-year-old man, hitting him multiple times. Police said he then fired shots into the crowd as he fled the scene.

Davis said the shooting compounded an already emotional day and that many funeral-goers were crying and were too frightened to leave the church.

"It took us three hours to get out because people just didn't feel safe going out," Davis said. Which is why Davis sent e-mails to every member of his congregation Saturday night, urging them to begin the healing with church on Sunday. And when more than 100 packed the pews, Davis had a special message he wanted to send to the black community in neighborhoods beset with violence.

"These kids out here in these gangs, these are our kids," he said. "We can't act like we don't know nobody in these gangs. We can pray all day, but praying a lot isn't going to solve the problem. We have a responsibility as parents to know where our children are. To know what they're up to and who they hang out with."

"You can't fault the police anymore. You can't fault the teachers any more. We have to take control of our houses."

Group blamed for attacks in Lincoln Park

A group of attackers are preying on men in their 20s walking alone in Lincoln Park, police said.

They creep up, getting just close enough for their victims to hear footsteps from behind. Then they strike, delivering vicious blows, enough to put at least one of four men recently attacked in the hospital with a broken jaw, police said.

"The first thing [victims] see is the fist that hits them," Chicago Police Sgt. Timothy Kusinski said Sunday. "It's a very surprise attack."

The motive is robbery, and the attackers have stolen the victims' wallets and cell phones, Kusinski said.

The incidents happened at 2 a.m. Thursday in the 600 block of West Fullerton Avenue; at 2:05 a.m. Thursday in the 2100 block of North Stockton Drive; at 3 a.m. Saturday in the 2000 block of North Cleveland Avenue; and at 3:36 a.m. Saturday in the 300 block of West Webster Avenue, police said.

The attackers—police said they believe the incidents are connected—have been described as men in their early 20s, police said. They haven't used any weapons other than their fists, and the injuries they've caused include facial fractures and head and throat trauma, Kusinski said.

The one man who remains hospitalized suffered a broken jaw and throat injuries in the 2100 block of North Stockton Drive, Kusinski said.

Of the attacks, one man was beat up and robbed by only one other man, but the other three incidents involved a group of three to four men pouncing on a man who was by himself, Kusinski said. A victim in one incident thought the attackers fled the scene in an older model small maroon car, police said.

A few of the victims were coming home from bars, but Kusinski said he couldn't say if they had been drinking.

The robberies happened in a densely populated area near Lincoln Park Zoo.

Zach Bornemeier, 28, who lives a few blocks west of the zoo, had just finished a cell phone call with family when he learned his lakefront community might not be that safe. It didn't faze him. He still plans to jog alone late at night along Stockton Drive.

"It just sounds like to me just one group of punks," Bornemeier said, adding he won't let a "few bad seeds" change his lifestyle.

But Casey Fictum, 21, a senior at DePaul University from Green Bay, said he would heed advice from police: Travel in groups.

"Plus, when you're drinking, people can beat the living crap out of [you]," Fictum said.

Anyone with information about the robberies should call police at 312-744-8263.

Two shot at Englewood party

A 19-year-old man was found shot to death Saturday evening at a block party in the 900 block of West 61st Street in Englewood, police said. Police found Deontae Smith, 19, of the 6700 block of South Throop Street with a gunshot wound to his chest, said Chicago Police News Affairs Officer Amina Greer. Another 17-year-old girl also was found shot in the thigh near the intersection of 61st and Green Streets.

Two shot in vehicles

Two men were fatally shot in vehicles early Sunday not far from one another in West Town. There is no indication that the shootings, one in the 1500 block of North Western Avenue and the other in the 1400 block of North California Avenue, were related.

One dead, one hurt in crash

A motorist was killed and his passenger injured when their vehicle drifted off the Eisenhower Expressway early Sunday and hit a tree. Illinois State Police said alcohol played a role in the crash, which happened about 3 a.m. in the eastbound lanes of I-290 near Kostner Avenue. The driver, Kennon Carter, 25, was dead on the scene, officials said.

Cubs: Enough of Bartman, already!

ESPN's plan to produce a documentary on Steve Bartman isn't going over too well in the Cubs clubhouse.

According to an ESPN press release, the documentary will try to answer the question: "Can Steve Bartman ever forgive Chicago?"

Aramis Ramirez and Derrek Lee both played in Game 6 of the 2003 National League Championship Series, when Bartman's attempt to catch a foul ball preceded an eight-run eighth inning for the Marlins.

Some blame Bartman for the collapse, and he has avoided publicity ever since.

Ramirez and Carlos Zambrano are the only two remaining Cubs from that team, while Lee played for the Marlins.

"I don't know what difference it's going to make for the fans of Chicago, or for Bartman himself," Ramirez said of ESPN's plans to forge ahead with or without Bartman's cooperation.

"To me, I don't see anything positive coming out of it for me as a player, or for us as players."

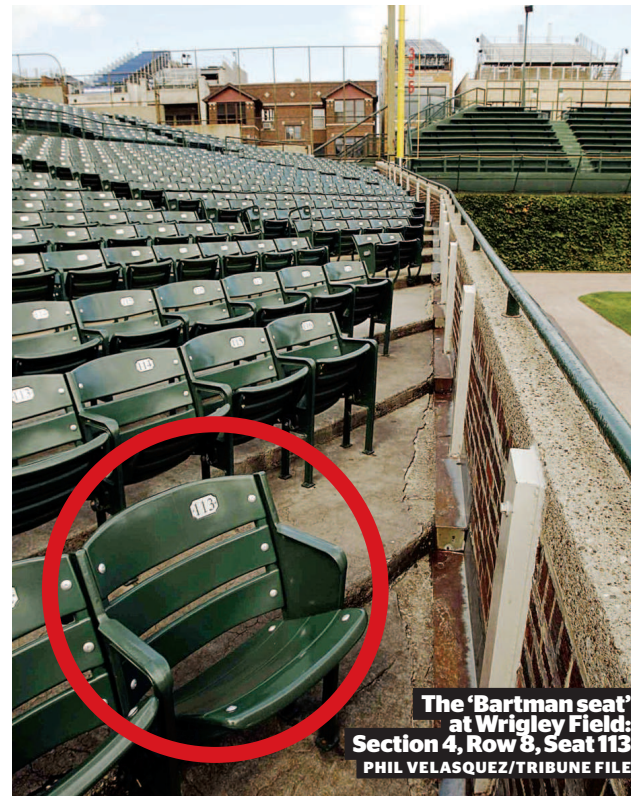

Lee, who was part of the Marlins' rally, said Bartman already has been absolved by most knowledgeable fans, and a documentary would make things worse for him.

"They should probably let it go," Lee said. "It's a non-issue. It didn't change the game, no matter what anyone says. He did what any fan would've done, and there were five other people trying to do the same thing. He just happened to get his hand on it. At the time, we saw Moises [Alou] get upset, but it's a play that happens quite a bit."

"It's not like it was some crazy, random thing. It happened. Now let it go."

Ramirez agreed with Lee and said the foul ball did not have a bearing on the game's outcome.

"Mo had a chance to make that play, but the ball was in the stands," he said. "Otherwise, they would've called the batter out [for fan interference]. After that [Alex] Gonzalez made an error and they scored five more runs, so it wasn't Bartman's fault. We just didn't get it done."

The 'Bartman seat' at Wrigley Field: Section 4, Row 8, Seat 113
PHIL VELASQUEZ/TRIBUNE FILE

Dead issue?

We asked RedEye's Twitter followers how they feel about ESPN's plan for a Bartman documentary. Here are some responses. RedEye plays a good game every day at twitter.com/redeyechicago.
COMPILED BY SCOTT KLEINBERG.

@LevNaginsky
most people let it go already. starting the argument again would create more animosity and no one can find the guy.

@nealtucker
I probably wouldn't be a great proponent of a fan capitalizing on ruining a game. Understandable that the Cubs aren't either.

@golden dragon35
they are still sore about it... GET OVER IT!!! The Cubs sucked, don't blame the guy for losing all the other games

@Machrider
People should stop blaming Bartman. The next play was an error by Alex Gonzalez that should have been an inning ending dp.

Gay priest nominated

About three weeks after the Episcopal Church lifted a de facto moratorium on selecting gay bishops, a Chicago priest in Ravenswood in a committed same-sex relationship has been named one of three nominees for Bishop of Minnesota. Rev. Bonnie Perry, pastor of All Saints Episcopal Church, told her parishioners in a statement on Sunday.

Swiss diplomats are trying to find out what happened to three Americans reportedly captured in Iran, the Foreign Ministry in Bern said Sunday. Iran confirmed Saturday that it detained the Americans, who they say crossed from northern Iraq.

3 New Gitmo?

The Obama administration is looking at creating a courtroom-within-a-prison complex in the U.S. to house suspected terrorists, combining military and civilian detention facilities at a single maximum-security prison.

4 LaGuardia mess

Air travelers at New York's LaGuardia Airport found themselves in a mess of delays and missed connections Saturday after a homeless man carried a fake bomb into its central terminal, authorities said. The man was arrested.

Connecticut Sen. Christopher Dodd, who announced he has an early stage of prostate cancer, expects to have surgery in New York before resting at home and says he expects to be back in Washington when Congress reconvenes in September.

7 TEL AVIV Reeling from the worst attack ever aimed at homosexuals in Israel, members of the country's gay community and their supporters rallied Sunday in the heart of Tel Aviv a day after a masked gunman killed two people at a center for gay youth and escaped.

As protesters with rainbow flags mourned the victims and condemned the homophobic sentiment assumed to be behind the attack, police hunted for the assailant throughout a city that has long prided itself on a live-and-let-live attitude and a thriving gay community.

"I fear that if the man who did this is not found, the consequences to the gay community might be far-reaching—they might live in fear," said Arnon Hirsch, a 47-year-old lawyer who was one of several hundred people who took part in the protest near the center attacked Saturday night.

Hirsch said he is openly gay and does not intend to act differently now. "I have no intention of giving in to terror," he said. "I'm not going to hide anywhere."

A masked man entered the center for gay teens in downtown Tel Aviv late Saturday night, pulled out a pistol and opened fire, according to Micky Rosenfeld, a police spokesman. The shooter then fled the scene on foot, Rosenfeld said.

Nitzan Horowitz, Israel's only openly gay lawmaker, called the attack a "hate crime."

"This is the worst attack ever against the gay community in Israel," he said.

New strain of HIV discovered in woman

8 WASHINGTON A new strain of the virus that causes AIDS has been discovered in a woman from Cameroon.

It differs from the three known strains of human immunodeficiency virus and appears to be closely related to a form of simian virus recently discovered in wild gorillas, researchers report in Monday's edition of the journal Nature Medicine.

The finding "highlights the continuing need to watch closely for the emergence for new HIV variants, particularly in western central Africa," said the researchers.

The three previously known HIV strains are related to the simian virus that occurs in chimpanzees. The most likely explanation for the new find is gorilla-to-human transmission, the researchers said.

Cubs closer Kevin Gregg reacts Sunday after giving up the game-winning home run to Cody Ross in the ninth inning. Dan Uggla tied the game with a home run in the previous at-bat. AP

FLORIDA 3, CUBS 2

Uggla loss for Cubs

Chicago Tribune

MIAMI Kevin Gregg did it again.

The Cubs closer blew a game for the second straight night, this time in stunning fashion in a 3-2 loss to Florida.

Entering the ninth with a 2-1 lead, Gregg retired the first batter he faced before serving up back-to-back home runs to Dan Uggla and Cody Ross.

Jake Fox's ninth-inning solo homer had given the Cubs a 2-1 lead.

Ryan Dempster pitched six shutout innings in his second start back from his broken toe. He allowed only three hits while striking out four and walking four.

Derrek Lee's run-scoring single in the third off Ricky Nolasco gave Dempster a 1-0 lead, and the right-hander was in line for the win when he was removed after 97 pitches on a hot afternoon.

But Aaron Heilman served up a game-tying home run to Ross in the eighth, the second blown save by a Cubs reliever in the last two days. But the worst was yet to come, and Gregg posted the Cubs' second blown save of the series.

» Cubs third baseman Aramis Ramirez was held out after getting hit on the left forearm Saturday. He said he'll try to play Monday at Cincinnati.

Peavy's changeup

Pitcher decides Chicago is the place for him after all, but why?

The Jake Peavy-to-the-White Sox trade was three months in the making. For those with short memories, Peavy rejected a trade to the Sox in May, saying "San Diego is the best place for us." Apparently, San Diego isn't the place for him anymore. Why is that? RedEye tries to figure out what changed his mind from May to July.

THEN

The White Sox were 17-23 the day they heard Peavy rejected the trade. And then they lost 20-1 to Minnesota. Not impressive.

NOW

The Sox are 54-52 and in the thick of the AL Central chase. San Diego is 43-62 and in last place. Also not impressive.

THEN

Peavy reportedly wanted to continue pitching in the National League.

NOW

The AL won the All-Star Game for the 13th straight time. If you can't beat 'em, join 'em, right Jake?

THEN

Peavy was healthy—and doing well.

NOW

He's hurt. What better place to be hurt than in Chicago, where the fans are desensitized to ailing superstars.

THEN

Mark Buehrle was simply a 6-1 pitcher. How ordinary.

NOW

Buehrle has pitched a perfect game and retired an MLB record 45 straight batters. Peavy's jealous.

New Sox star makes his pitch—sort of

Chicago Tribune

After watching Jake Peavy throw in a batting cage Saturday, White Sox manager Ozzie Guillen had a “feeling he’s going to be out on the field sooner than what we think.”

After watching White Sox batters put 29 runs on the Yankees in the last three days, including 14 on Saturday, Peavy might be even more encouraged to speed things along.

“No doubt about it, I’ll take my chances with 14,” Peavy said with a smile.

Peavy wasn’t as ready as Guillen to predict a return earlier than the end-of-August one the Sox are projecting for full recovery from a strained right ankle tendon. But he did pronounce himself “pain-free” after throwing 50 pitches in the bullpen early Sunday morning, a session Guillen did not watch.

“Everything went well, but I have a long way to go,” Peavy said. “Not having thrown in six weeks and then getting back on the mound, it’s like starting over again in Spring Training.”

“The biggest thing was everything was pain-free. The ankle was a non-issue. I threw all my pitches, trying to get a feel to accelerate this thing as fast as we can get back out there. You have to be smart about it. It was a good day.”

Peavy will return to San Diego for a few days to take care of personal business before the Sox set out a definite rehab plan.

N.Y. YANKEES 8, WHITE SOX 5

White Sox fans can put away the brooms, unless they want to clean up the mess that Mark Buehrle left Sunday.

But the Sox will settle for taking three of four games from the East Division leaders—their sixth straight series win at U.S. Cellular Field—despite Sunday’s 8-5 loss that kept them a 1½ games behind Detroit.

As Buehrle discovered, this can be a humbling game, having gone from a perfect game the last time at the Cell to 0-2 with a 10.12 ERA in his last two starts.

“Yeah, you go out there and get 45 straight guys out, and then I can’t get two guys out in a row,” he said. “That’s why I’ve said this game’s a crazy game.”

1 How could the Sox get Jake Peavy but the Cubs couldn't?	That's an easy one. Kenny Williams is all desire. Jim Hendry is part desire, part corporate hack.	That caught me off-guard. He was coming over pre-injured . The Cubs never pass on that.	The Cubs' training staff already is pulling double overtime shifts.	"Couldn't get it done." It's been the Cubs' motto for 101 years.	There are no vacancies on the Cubs' disabled list.
2 Looks like Jay Cutler could use a nickname. What's your suggestion?	"The First Coming."	"J-Cut." Although I'm pretty sure Jimmy nicknamed one of his biceps that. I think "Cher" is the other one.	Considering that his initials are J.C., "Bears Messiah."	Brian Urlacher would simply like to insert an "N" somewhere in Jay Cutler's name.	"A Cutler Above."
3 What will be the first real controversy during Bears training camp?	Jay Cutler throws a pass 12 inches too high, fans call for his trade.	It will erupt after Lovie Smith announces that "Rex Grossman is our quarterback."	Cutler will get caught turning Gatorade into wine.	Bears players arguing with play-by-play voice Jeff Joniak over who really is most ridiculous.	Staley Da Bear vs. Bear Jordan sideline spat. He just can't share the spotlight.
4 Who in Chicago sports really deserves an ESPN documentary?	Jerry Reinsdorf. Most important sports figure in Chicago history.	If by "documentary" you mean "intervention," then Milton Bradley.	I'm dying to see "Beneath the Scalp: The Jimmy Greenfield Story."	Hawk Harrelson. His love of Catfish, his hate for umpires and his desire to demolish the Metrodome.	Mark Prior. His career already is over? That is mind-boggling.
5 More dominant: Michael Phelps or Tiger Woods?	Phelps. It's apples to oranges, but Phelps never missed a cut.	Tiger Woods. Putts over putz.	Phelps is like Aquaman, who dominates in the water, but who cares? So I say Tiger.	You're really mentioning Phelps in the same sentence as Tiger? You must be smoking Phelps' bong.	Tiger. The competition in golf is much deeper, no pun intended.

JAY TALKING

A day-to-day look at Cutler's first training camp with the Bears.

Ho-hum day: Nothing too spectacular from Cutler on Day 3. He completed his first 12 passes during 7-on-7 drills. His first incompletion was an uncharacteristic drop by Matt Forte. Cutler started full-team drills 0-for-3. Cutler completed 18 of 23, by the Tribune's count.

Wild side: The crowd buzzed as Cutler split out wide left and Devin Hester lined for the direct snap in the "Wildcat" formation. Cutler pretty much stayed out of the way as Hester did his thing.

Lovie-ism: (On the Wildcat) "Jay Cutler's an athlete too. So who knows, we may throw him a pass out there." Smith quickly recanted his statements, saying the Bears wouldn't be throwing to Cutler and that it was a "bad joke." Guess he didn't want to give the Packers advance notice.

PHIL VELASQUEZ/TRIBUNE

Cutler's go-to guy

BOURBONNAIS This move didn't come out of the playbook Earl Bennett has learned, chapter and verse. It came from memory. The pass pattern Bennett ran during a one-on-one drill against cornerback Nathan Vasher called for him to basically run a short down-and-out that Vasher had covered. When quarterback Jay Cutler faked a throw, Bennett slowed down to make his break. But when Cutler held onto the ball after pumping once, Bennett knew that meant he wanted his former

Vanderbilt teammate to improvise upfield and run under a perfectly placed spiral. Vasher bought Bennett's fake and paid a dear price. "It was the first time I ran that route and we just called up a normal play and he gave me a pump on that and all I had to do was turn up and catch it," Bennett said. "It's a great route and I hope we put it in the game plan." August is too early to predict how significantly the Bears' game plans will involve

Bennett, the de facto rookie who began camp as a starting wide receiver opposite Devin Hester. But one thing everybody at Olivet Nazarene already knows: If Bennett emerges as a solid wide receiver the way his teammates and coaches insist he can, the Bears offense will gain a threat and lose a nagging problem. "He's a different cat, he's a year older, and knows we believe in him," wide receivers coach Darryl Drake said.

How the tax hike on booze might affect your bill at the bar—and where you still can score $1 drinks

By Lisa Arnett

Attention, dutiful drinking citizens of Illinois: As of Sept. 1, a tax hike on booze is set to kick in to fund the state's latest public works program. Before you panic, this doesn't mean you'll pay more in sales tax on booze at the register. It means bar owners will pay more in beverage tax to their wholesalers—an estimated 13 cents more on a bottle of wine, 80 cents more on an average bottle of liquor and 5 cents on a 12-pack of beer.

With those extra costs adding up fast behind the bar, we asked local bar owners if the extra cost would trickle down to our bar tabs in the form of upped prices. The answer? It certainly could.

"There is nothing subtle or easy about this tax; it is simply a massive punch in the face," says David Azizinamini, owner of Blue Line in Wicker Park, who figures the additional tax will add up to thousands over the next year. "The bottom line is that we will be forced to pass the costs on to our guests, which we do not want to do."

Greg Mohr, co-owner of The Fifty/50, is taking the wait-and-see-approach, intending to hold onto the bar's daily specials as long as possible. "We're going to ... just weather it and hope we can do more business to make up for the extra cost."

Other spots might dock their offerings in an attempt to recoup. "One option we are seriously considering is scaling back our options in alcohol and beer," says Steven Milford, co-owner of Wild Pug and Crew in Uptown, the latter of which stocks 68 kinds of beer. "With fewer options, we would go through more products quickly, earning us money back sooner."

Ready to cry into your beer already? At least you still can get drinks for a dollar at these spots ... for now.

It takes more than good looks to make the Bulls' dance team

By Ryan Smith | FOR REDEYE

Melissa Driscoll slumped in her chair and took a deep breath before recovering her ever-present smile. "I could definitely use some coffee soon," she said moments after her audition for the Bulls' dance team Saturday.

Performing for a panel of judges to Justin Timberlake's supercharged "SexyBack" is hard enough, but Driscoll, 25, had an added challenge—she arrived at the tryout in a moving van at the conclusion of a 17-hour journey from Boston.

Talk about having the drive to become a Luvabull.

Driscoll was one of 252 women from Chicago and beyond who flocked to the United Center to twirl, sway and sashay their way onto the Luvabulls dance team. Former Dallas Cowboys cheerleader Melissa Rycroft has brought widespread notoriety to professional sports dance teams through her appearances on reality TV shows including "Dancing With the Stars," but actually making the team is an exhausting and competitive process.

At Saturday's tryouts, the judges were ruthless by necessity, whittling the list of contenders to only 50 who moved on to a three-day mini-camp that starts Monday. When the final decisions are made Wednesday, only 25 dancers will be able to call themselves Luvabulls.

Addressing the women before auditions began Saturday, team director Cathy Core was direct about what it takes to be a Luvabull.

"You need to have lipstick on, your hair should be fashionable, if you have glasses take them off, tattoos need to be covered up, no belly rings ... we're sticklers for a polished look," Core said. "You have to be the total package, the total picture of what we're looking for. It's not just looks or your ability to dance, it's everything."

The speech prompted Amy Jesse to pull the mirror back out of her makeup bag, comb her hair and apply more lipstick.

"I'm really nervous," the 21-year-old from Naperville confided. "I almost decided not to come this morning when I woke up and I don't expect to be picked, but at the same time I'm excited to be here."

Twenty at a time, the potential Luvabulls—all required to be 21 or older—had several minutes to introduce themselves and perform a couple of free-style dance moves and a kick line for Core and her panel of six judges. Some dancers advanced to an afternoon session, where they were joined by former Luvabulls who must dance for their jobs back.

"There are no gimmies," Core said. "Everyone's got to audition."

Driscoll, the import from Boston, was one of the 50 dancers invited to this week's mini-camp.

"I'm resting up and unpacking, but I'm so excited to start," she told RedEye by phone Sunday.

The women who join the team, which is entering its 30th season, will perform at 41 home games, plus make dozens of promotional appearances on behalf of the club. And for all of the dancers, that's in addition to full-time jobs.

So why do they want to be Luvabulls? The women who spoke to RedEye said it's their love of dance.

"I've visited Tokyo, Greece, London and Paris, and I've had so many opportunities to perform in special appearances," said Erika Cruz, who served as dance team captain last season. "It's really amazing."

Even after six years on the team, the satisfaction of making the squad is fresh for Cruz.

"When they called my number the first year it was surreal, and it's still surreal," said Cruz. "I mean, I'm on the court and standing next to Derrick Rose or Kobe Bryant. There are so many exciting moments and I really look forward to every game because you never know what's going to happen."

How do they achieve that physique?

It's not easy to look great in the midriff-baring, thigh-exposing, figure-hugging outfits the Bulls' professional dance team dons during games.

"We really have to be at our best because we're showing our stomach, legs and arms a lot," said Erika Cruz, a six-year veteran of the Luvabulls.

Saturday's tryouts mean the Luvabulls' short off-season is over, and there is no time for the team to waste. Just as Derrick Rose must have the endurance to lead his team in the fourth quarter of an exhausting game, the dancers need to be in peak condition to keep fans pumped up from tip-off to the final horn.

Of course, just because you're not one of the 25 women dancing in the United Center doesn't mean you can't work toward that type of body.

Luvabulls dancer Ashley Bond said she has been preparing herself for the season with kickboxing, strength exercises and yoga.

"My goal is to stay lean and toned and still be able to have lots of endurance so that when we get to those games, I'm not dying after my first routine," said Bond, a fitness trainer who also happens to be the reigning Miss Illinois.

Once basketball season starts, the Luvabulls get all the exercise they need through high-intensity dance routines they perform during games in addition to two four-hour practices every week.

Fast-tempo dance burns between 200 and 400 calories per hour, according to Naomi Wisely, a dance fitness instructor at Flirty Girl Fitness located on the Near West Side.

"Dancing can help almost every part of your body," she said. "You're engaging your arms and legs a lot, and you have to hold your core to keep your balance, so it's good for that area too."

TV reality shows such as "Dancing With the Stars" have contributed to a rising popularity of dance fitness, Wisely said. To accommodate demand, Flirty Girl has boosted its schedule to offer more than 40 classes that cover hip-hop, Latin and even pole dancing at all skill levels.

"You don't even realize you're working out until you're sore because it's so fun," she said.

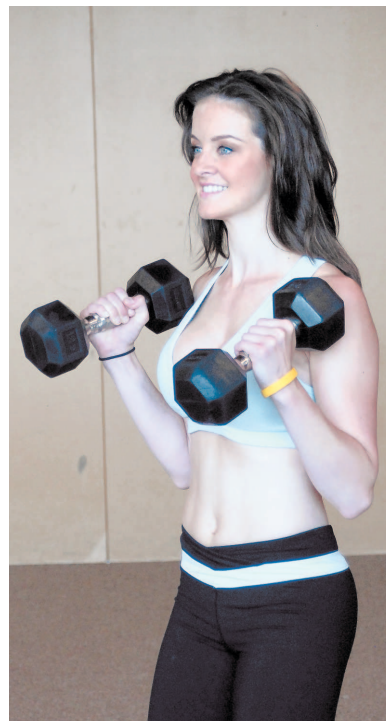

Beyond exercising, Bond said she maintains a dancer's physique by adhering to a strict diet regimen, eating small meals or snacks every three hours. She eats foods high in protein, avoids carbs at night and includes a lot of fresh vegetables and fruit in her meals.

"Everyone knows their own body the best," she said, "but really it's all about eating healthy and to stop eating when you're not hungry."

TRAIN LIKE A LUVABULL

If you want a body like a Luvabull, you'll have to work for it! RedEye asked Bulls dancer Ashley Bond to demonstrate a few of the exercises that help her achieve the lean, toned figure of a dancer. Try these during your next trip to the gym. RYAN SMITH FOR REDEYE

Dumbbell curls

Holding comfortable weights (Bond used 12-pounders), bend your elbows and pull the dumbbells up to your chest, focusing the tension on your biceps.

Desired effect: Stronger, toned arms

Shoulder retractions

Stand with your feet shoulder-width apart and hold the ends of a resistance band directly in front of you. Squeeze your shoulder blades together, stretching the band in front of you.

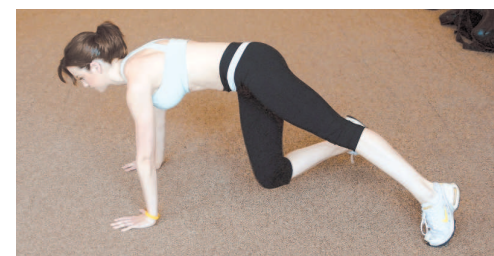

Desired effect: Stronger upper back, better posture

Kettlebell swings

Set your feet beyond shoulder width. From a half-squat, extend your arms forward to swing the kettlebell to shoulder height.

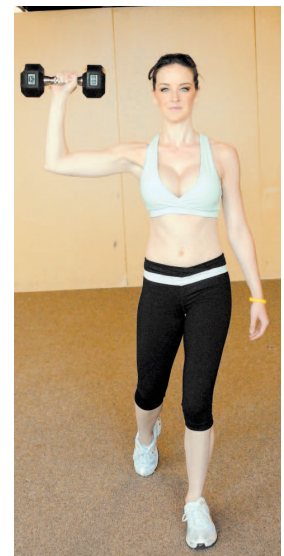

Desired effect: Strength and flexibility in quadriceps, hamstrings and glutes

Modified mountain climbers

From a push-up position, pull a knee toward the opposite shoulder.

Desired effect: Stronger core muscles in back and abdomen

Split stance shoulder press

With one foot slightly in front of you and another slightly behind, use one arm to push a comfortable dumbbell weight toward the ceiling. Leave the other arm in a relaxed position by your side.

Desired effect: Stronger shoulders and toned core muscles

HAPPY BIRTHDAY LEO

July 23 to Aug. 22
A moon opposition has you griping about a former flame. Complaining about an old lover only gives that person more power over you. Stop obsessing about the past and start focusing on the future. Schedule some casual dates, and you'll soon feel better.

Virgo

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You tend to take care of your lovers, fussing over them like a mother. Unfortunately, you also attract losers who need lots of coddling. Right now, your current partner is draining you dry. Mercury is reminding you not to expend so much energy trying to "fix" people.

Libra

Sept. 23-Oct. 23

A lunar eclipse could leave you flying blind in a relationship. One minute you're in love, the next minute things are a disaster. Then, just when you're about to give up, you and your partner come together with fresh passion. The saga continues.

Scorpio

Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You and your honey don't have to agree about everything. Variety is the spice of life, and differences of opinion can make for a richer and more satisfying relationship. Mars is reminding you that you don't have to win every argument.

Sagittarius

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Sometimes you surround yourself with completely insane people. Mercury is showing you that right now, your social circle isn't the healthiest. Navigate away from the losers. Spend time with that "boring" but steady guy or that nerdy but nice girl.

Capricorn

Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You'll want to party on as the moon reminds you that you need the occasional round of fun. Visit that hot new club and disco the night away. Or attend a musical concert with a few good friends. Don't forget to flirt with cute strangers.

Aquarius

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

The full moon in your sign is showing you exactly where you stand in a relationship. Either things are going to improve dramatically or they will completely collapse. At least you'll know which way the wind is headed instead of having to play so many guessing games.

Pisces

Feb. 19-March 20

You're under a lot of financial pressure right now, so a budget date might be in order. Take your honey to an all-you-can-eat buffet and rent a movie instead of going to the local cineplex. The moon is reminding you that you need to keep track of your cash flow.

Aries

March 21-April 19

Sometimes you tell people too much about your sex life. Instead of gossiping with friends about your current honey, you should focus on improving your relationship. Pluto says ignore what other people think. Their opinion doesn't matter.

Taurus

April 20-May 20

You could discover that you're suddenly getting along with someone you used to hate. Could this be true love? Or true lust? Powerful forces of attraction are at work, thanks to flirty Mercury. Explore a little further and see what happens.

Gemini

May 21-June 21

Neptune is turning you into a total space cadet. You'll forget where you put your keys, neglect to walk the dog or leave your laptop on the morning train. Ask your honey to help you get more grounded. Some sweaty, animal passion should take care of things.

Cancer

June 22-July 22

You and your honey could achieve dazzling levels of pleasure, courtesy of sexy Venus. You'll find new erogenous zones or discover hot new role-playing scenarios that get your blood pumping. Overdose on some sensual fun.

Is HBO hot again?

'Curb Your Enthusiasm'

With the new season launching on Sept. 20, the chatter is about the much-anticipated reunion of the entire "Seinfeld" cast, to be played out over five episodes.

'Big Love'

The show achieved new creative heights in its third season and has received an Emmy nomination for best drama.

'Entourage'

Will this dramedy about a bunch of bros making their way in Hollywood ever get old? Apparently not.

Contra Costa Times

PASADENA, Calif. Unless you dumped your subscription in disgust, or to just save a few bucks, you may have noticed that HBO is worth watching again.

There was a time, of course, when it seemed that the pay-cable titan could do no wrong. The hits kept coming and so did the buzz. And in the process, TV's bar was jacked up several notches.

But then HBO sort of lost its way. And when it came to water-cooler mojo, it often found itself outdone by arch-rival Showtime and even basic cable outlets like FX and AMC. The critics naturally pounced.

"Two years ago we were feeling beat up," HBO executive Quentin Schaffer admitted in front of a horde of journalists at a summer press tour. "Now we're feeling upbeat." So what's hot and what's not at that storied premium cable channel? Check it.

'Hung'

The show is all about below-the-waist jokes about its well-endowed lead character.

'Flight of the Conchords'

The cult favorite also was honored with its first Emmy nomination for top comedy.

Alexander Skarsgard as Eric in 'True Blood' HBO

DID YOU KNOW?

HBO nabbed a leading 99 nominations last month when Emmy contenders were announced. For more TV trivia, check out RedEye guru Curt Wagner's blog at redeychicago.com/showpatrol. It's always on.

'True Blood'

Alan Ball's vampire drama has become the network's most popular show in its second season, attracting more than 10 million viewers per week on a cumulative basis.

All stars ... all the time

Chicago was in celebrity-sightings overdrive last week. Deep breath—here we go!

MORE ONLINE

For more, check out Liz's blog at thesebootsaremadeforstalking.com.

» "The Bachelorette" star Jillian Harris and fiancé Ed Swiderski took their relationship public last week here in Swiderski's hometown. Swiderski took Harris to SushiSamba Rio for dinner with friends Thursday night, and from the looks of it, the wedding is still on! Harris was sporting her ring and the couple appeared to be "very much in love," according to eyewitnesses.

» Hugh Jackman and Daniel Craig were spotted together at the Four Seasons last week. The stars were in town researching their roles as Chicago cops in their upcoming Broadway show, "A Steady Rain." They made an announced visit Thursday to the Cook County Criminal Courts, the Tribune reported.

Jackman's trip was not limited to work: Thursday night he popped up at Joe's with Richard Marx to check out the band KingBilly. The duo surprised the crowd and got onstage at one point to perform Marx's hit "Right Here Waiting." Jackman also was spotted working out with a personal trainer in The Gym at The James Hotel.

» The New York Yankees played the Sox over the weekend and their star players, Alex Rodriguez and Derek Jeter, were spotted all over the city. On Thursday, A-Rod spent the afternoon shopping at Ralph Lauren and Giorgio Armani and had lunch with friends at Rosebud. A-Rod and Jeter dined at Sunda on Saturday night at separate tables and after A-Rod swung by the Wit hotel.

» Jamie Foxx had a vacay in Chicago last week in between his tour stops and didn't refrain from letting it rip. Foxx dined at Sunda two nights in a row and also gave two impromptu nightclub performances. He took the mic at Underground on Friday night and ordered Berry Chill yogurt for all his peeps. On Saturday night at Manor he gave another mini-performance, singing "Happy Birthday" to his half-sister.

IN OTHER WEDDING NEWS ...

Wedding belle

Larter

The wedding bug bit "Heroes" star Ali Larter over the weekend as well. Larter and actor Hayes MacArthur were married Saturday at MacArthur's parents' estate in Kennebunport, Maine, Us Weekly reported on its Web site. "Crank" star

Amy Smart was among the guests at the wedding, the culmination of more than six years of dating for Larter and MacArthur.

Mark Wahlberg felt some good vibrations over the weekend (c'mon, c'mon!)—tying the knot at long last with Rhea Durham.

"The Departed" star and his bride, who have three children, married Saturday in a Beverly Hills church, People magazine reported.

Earlier this year, Wahlberg had hinted at making things official with Durham, and apparently he's a man of his word: "We're talking about August," he told People at the time.

Durham wore a white strapless Marchesa dress with silver embroidery, according to People.

THE VELVET ROPE

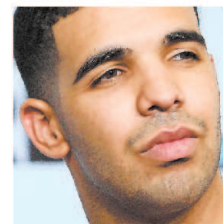

Jay-Z

This one goes out to ...

Jay-Z paid tribute to the Beastie Boys—and Adam Yauch, whose cancer diagnosis prompted the rap trio to put their tour on hold—as he filled in for them at New Jersey's All Points West festival Friday night. Jay opened with the Beasties classic "No Sleep Till Brooklyn" and dedicated the rest of his set to Yauch, mtv.com reports.

Cruising for Dave

Proving that not all Dave Matthews Band boat-related experiences have to be traumatic, the band is offering fans a chance to win a cruise to a private concert in the Bahamas, according to rollingstone.com. Back in 2004, the band's tour bus dumped sewage into the Chicago River and onto a sightseeing boat, but this cruise sounds a lot nicer. The contest entry deadline, by the way, is the end of August.

Drake

Fall guy

Elsewhere in New Jersey, the news wasn't so good for rapper Drake. The "Best I Ever Had" rhymers took a tumble Friday night in Camden, N.J., during his touring show with Lil Wayne and had to be carried off the stage, mtv.com reports. The following night, Lil Wayne announced Drake wouldn't be able to perform and was undergoing surgery. Will Drake be able to get back on tour? Stay tuned.

THE DIGIT

$23.4 million

Estimated weekend earnings for Adam Sandler's dramedy "Funny People," giving it the No. 1 spot on the box-office chart. Harry Potter held on to the No. 2 spot, earning an estimated $17.7 million, the AP reported.
